Electrical safety by the numbers

May is electrical safety month – a time to remember to practice these safety rules year round.

1. Look up

Watch for power lines when lifting ladders, tree pruners, irrigation pipes or long-handled equipment. Always look up to avoid getting near or contacting overhead power lines.

2. Call 811 before you dig

Contacting underground utilities is dangerous. For a free service to locate underground lines, at least 48 hours before digging call 811 or One Call of Wyoming at 1-800-849-2476.

3. Stay away from downed lines

Never assume a line on the ground is not energized. Stay away and immediately call 911 or Rocky Mountain Power toll free at 1-888-221-7070.

Safety presentations

Rocky Mountain Power delivers safety presentations to hundreds of schoolchildren and community groups each year. To schedule a presentation, call us toll free at 1-800-375-7085.

Energy assistance needed year round

Many households in Wyoming face financial difficulties and find it tough to cover basic expenses. The economy and unemployment has hit many who have never before struggled financially.

You can help. Our customers, along with our employees and Rocky Mountain Power, support Energy Share of Wyoming, a nonprofit program administered by The Salvation Army that helps at-risk households keep their electricity on.

Please donate in the Energy Share envelope enclosed with next month's bill. Or sign up to give a fixed amount each month through your monthly bill. To learn more and to enroll, call us toll free at 1-888-221-7070.

BRIGHT IDEAS

Sun power

Put the sun to work with a solar charger. Portable solar chargers on the market today can recharge everything from cell phones to laptop computers – perfect for traveling or when you're off the beaten path. You can find them on specialty backpacks, laptop carrying cases and even on an outdoor vest to keep your gadgets charged when working or playing outdoors. A number of Web sites sell solar chargers or check with local retailers. Do some research before buying the one that best meets your needs.

SAFETY MATTERS

Play safe

Summer's on the way so please take a moment to remind children how dangerous electricity can be and to follow these tips when outdoors:

- Stay out of trees with power lines nearby and do not fly kites near lines.
- Never climb power poles, transmission towers, or substation fences and stay away from green utility boxes (transformers).
- Stay out of fenced substations. The equipment is extremely dangerous.
- Stay away from any power line on the ground. Tell an adult immediately or report it by calling 911 or Rocky Mountain Power toll free at 1-888-221-7070.

Have a happy and safe summer. Visit rockymountainpower.net/safety for more tips on using electricity safely.

Find outdoor fun at recreation sites

Each year young and old alike flock to Rocky Mountain Power recreation sites. These sites, associated with our electric generating facilities, offer a range of outdoor activities – hiking, camping, picnicking, fishing and boating. Our Web site at rockymountainpower.net/recreation lists the sites and their amenities. Or call us toll free at 1-888-221-7070.

Please help us protect these natural areas by keeping the invasive Quagga and Zebra mussels and the New Zealand mudsnail from spreading. These mollusks have decimated waterways in the Midwest and Southwest, choking out nutrients needed to sustain fish and causing costly damage to hydroelectric facilities. When transported between waterways, they spread their damage.

Summer activities abound at Rocky Mountain Power recreation sites.

In many states it's illegal to transport these invasive species. When boating or fishing, make sure you're not inadvertently carrying the hitchhikers. Visit www.protectyourwaters.net for tips on how to decontaminate your boat or fishing equipment after each outing.
